A taut, red goatskin between poles stuck in shadows of the moon the last fire before the battle The somber ecstasy of soldiers dancing a prayer spreading under their feet beards magic with dust and chants The enemy to be bombarded this black and yellow night by voices out of the throats of guns harmonizing

The sleep of soldiers under goatskins together with the sleep of peasants in a thousand fields together with the sleep of workers brilliant with dreams The now smooth air soon to be detonated by the fight
The aged night full of the croon-croon of indigenous, conquering little birds
