Title
You are so heavy

Permalink
https://escholarship.org/uc/item/8wf274kg

Journal
Electronic Green Journal, 1(20)

ISSN
1076-7975

Author
Czuchajowski, Leszek

Publication Date
2004-04-01

Peer reviewed
You are so heavy
said the atom of magnesium to the atom of iron it's so hard to move you from your place between the four pyrrole rings!
-so, don't move me
I am fine here
-are you really?
so why you were saying
that you are fed up with the redness
which you give to the blood?
if I take your place in hemoglobin and you
replace me
in chlorophyll of leaves could you imagine how much we would change the world?
the plants becoming red the blood becoming green!
people walking in red forests or making love on red grass? perhaps they would finally stop killing each other scared of green blood poring out of the bodies?
-you are right
said the atom of iron push me then harder out of here and replace me
so we will teach people a lesson:
they would stop finally thinking that only they can achieve everything

Leszek Czuchajowski leszek@uidaho.edu is a chemistry professor at the University of Idaho.

"You are so heavy" is from the collection of poems titled Molecules, Women, Gods and published by the Plus Publishing in Krakow, Poland, 2002.